General Henry Knox is not the most commonly heard name among American heroes of the War of Independence. He played an important role in that effort, first, at the age of 25, being placed in charge of retrieving captured cannon from Fort Ticonderoga by General George Washington. Later, Knox played a critical role in the famous crossing of the Delaware River and the attack on Trenton, New Jersey. By the war’s end, he had been promoted to the rank of major general. He became the nation’s first Secretary of War under President Washington.
